Inner Energy—Maya Romanoff

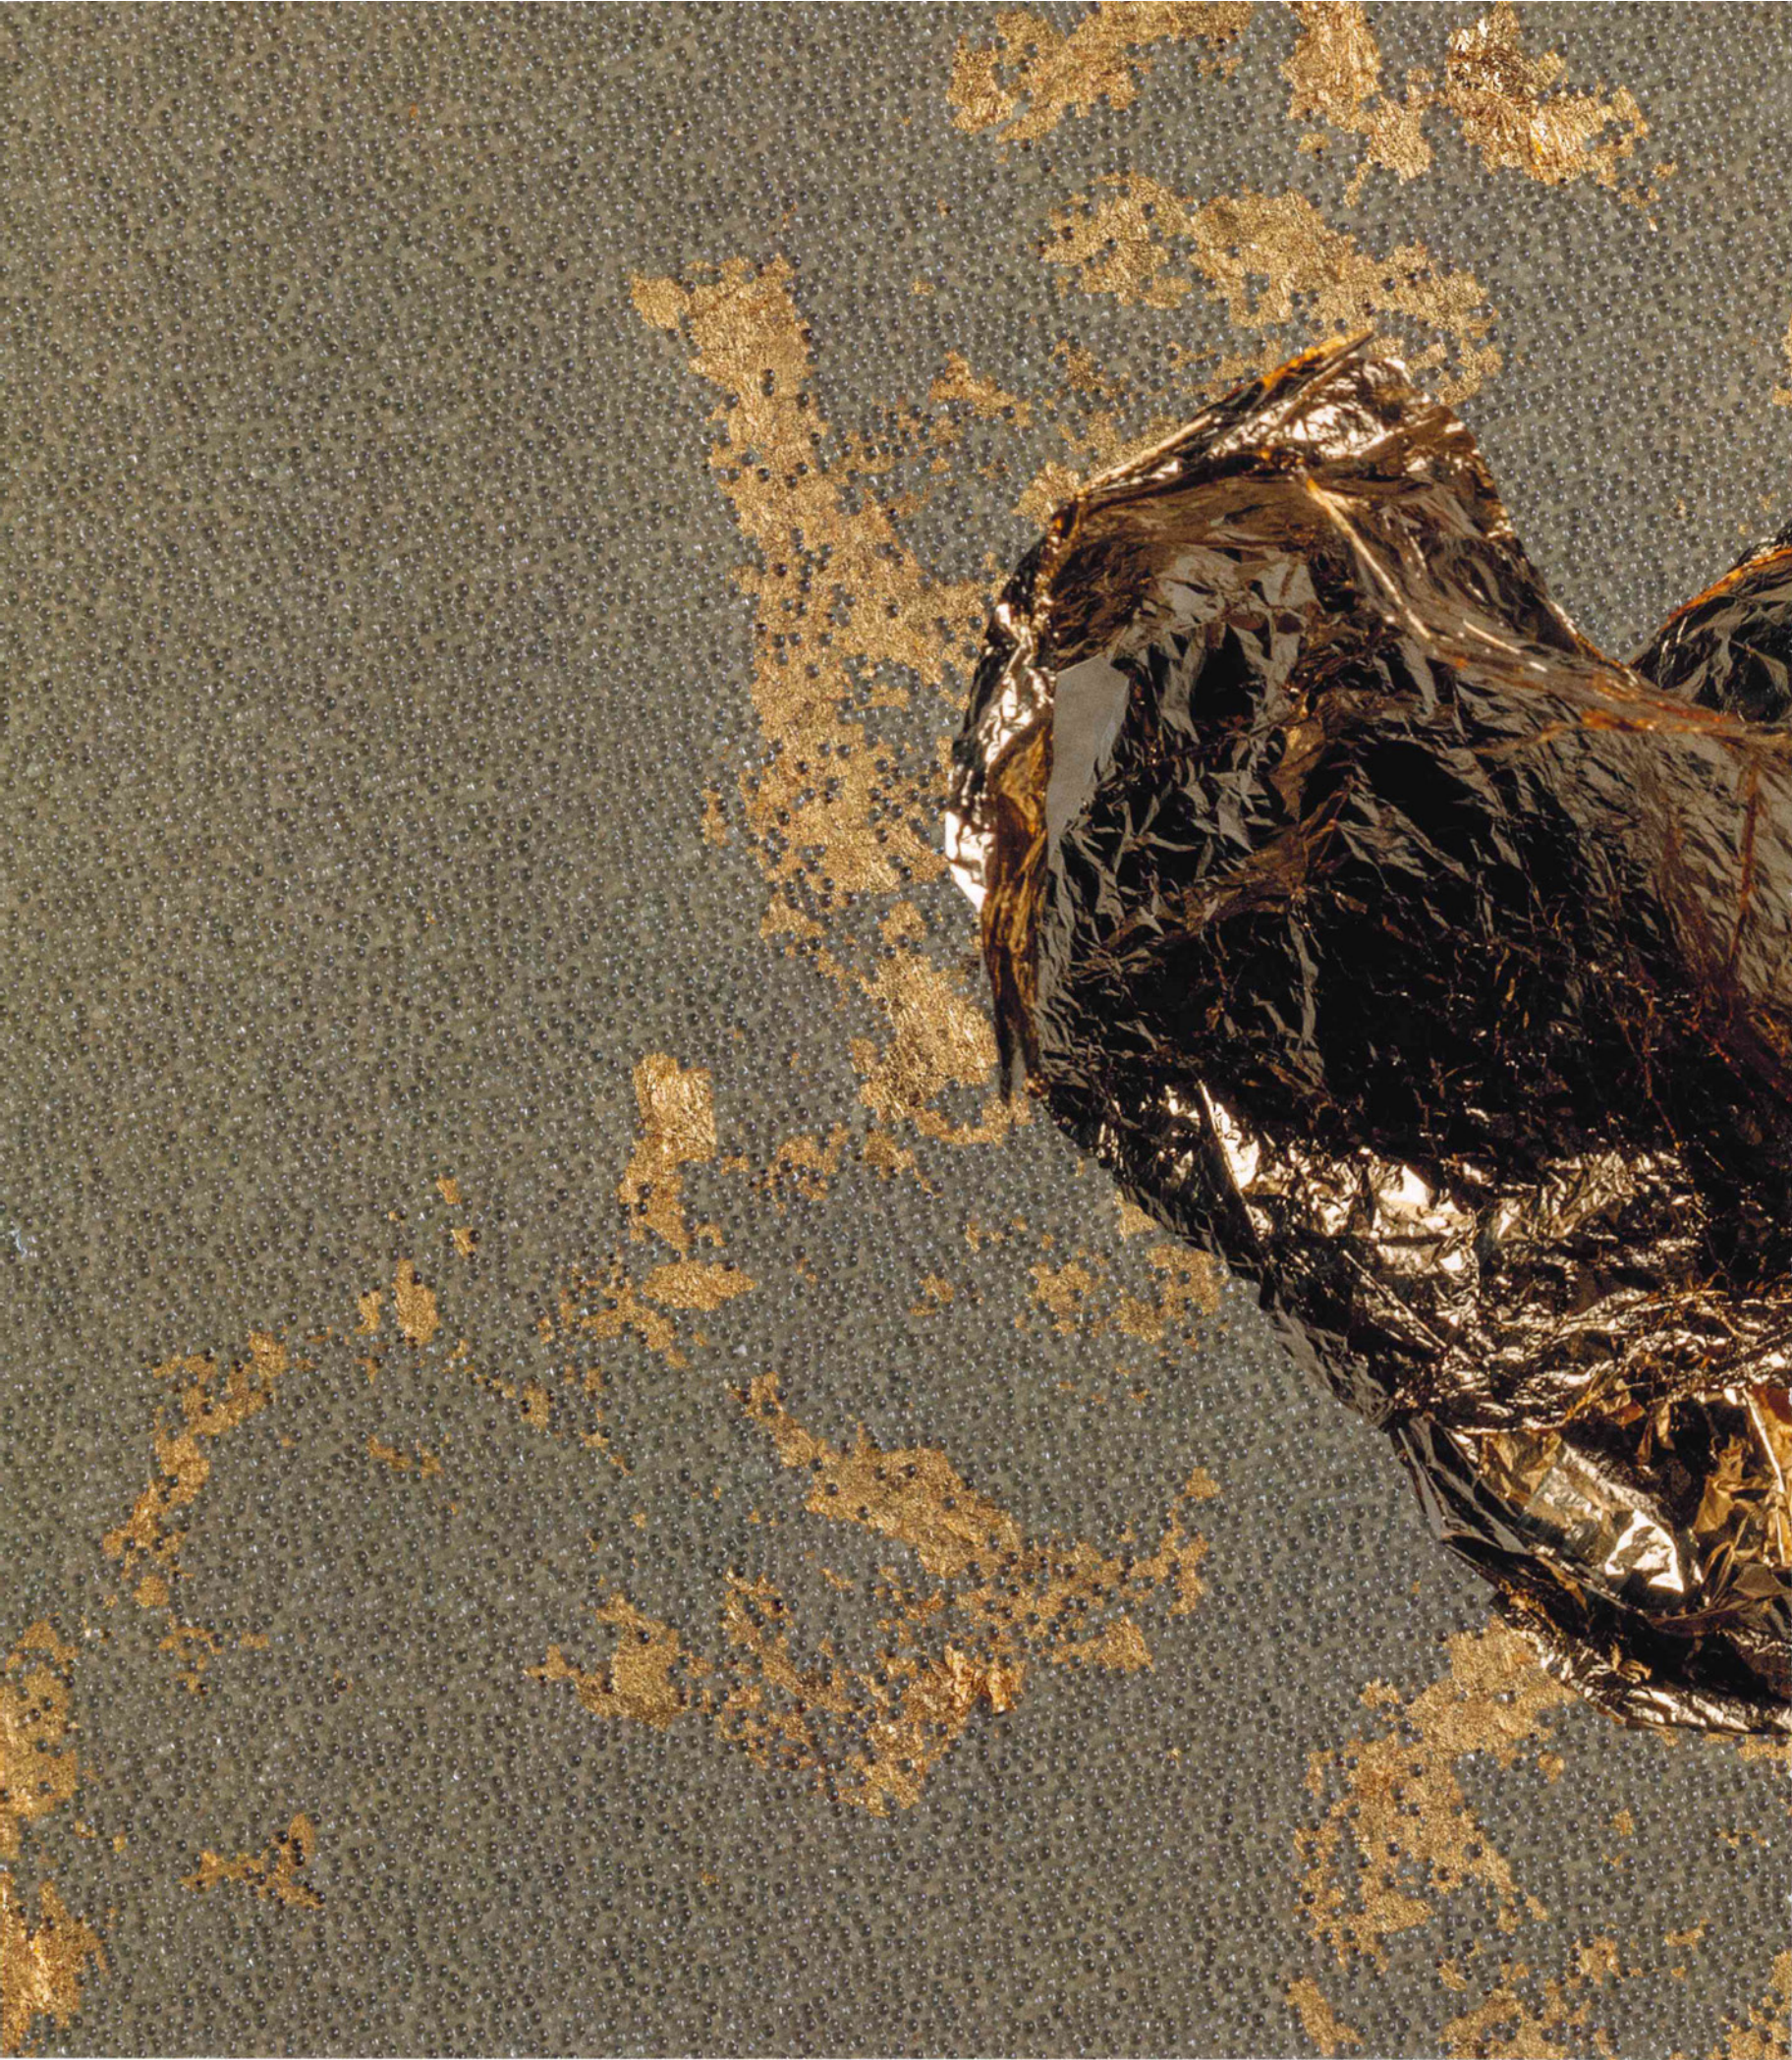

- 44 Maya Romanoff's artisanal wallcoverings radiate a unique inner spirit formed by the melding of texture, color, and mood. When paired with thoughtful, human-centered design, these pieces become more than just decorative elements—they channel a quiet but powerful energy that breathes life into a space.

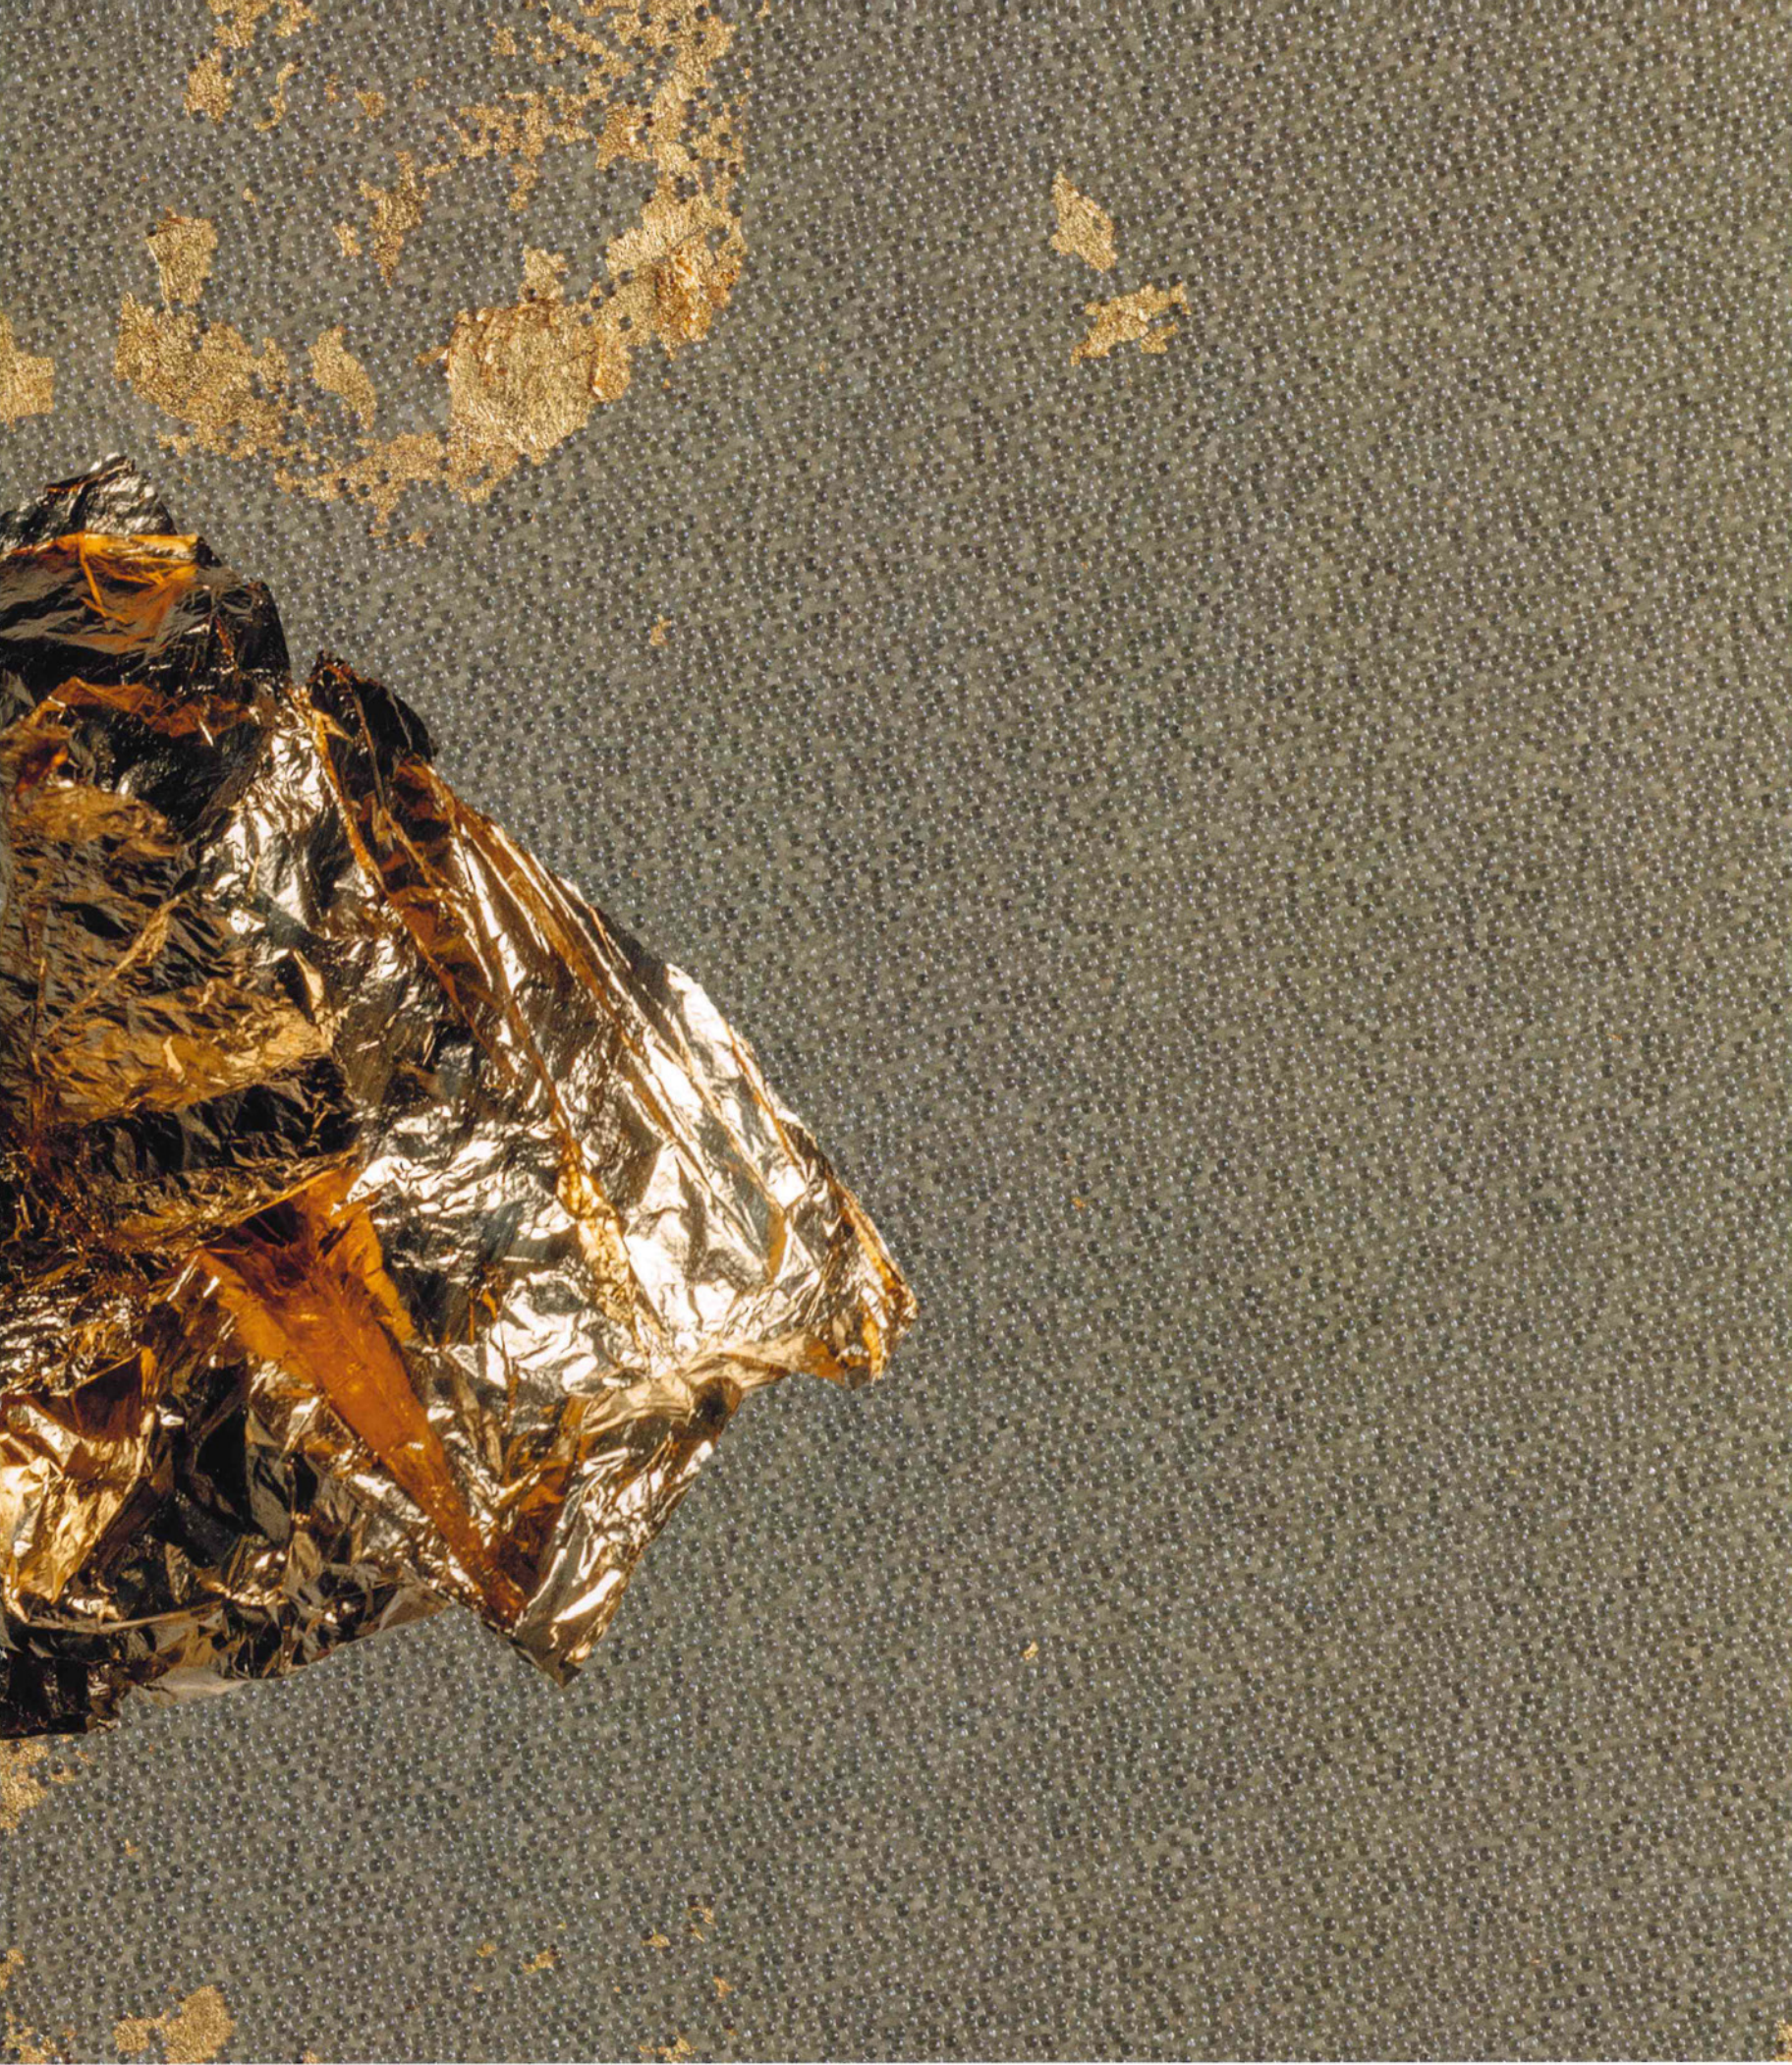

Inner Energy is about exploring how materials and images work together to transform environments from the inside out, giving designers a fresh way to think about the connection between form, feeling, and the spaces we live in. Each wallcovering encourages those experiencing them to look deeper at the places they adorn—and into the true spirit of the space itself.

← Serigraph Moderne transforms walls into tactile landscapes with its raised lines and textured surfaces. The subtle geometric patterns add depth and intrigue, inviting viewers to look closer. Serigraph Moderne fits seamlessly into minimalist interiors, offering a rich, layered aesthetic.

↑ Meditations Ohm embodies the spirit of handmade craftsmanship, where every sheet is meticulously formed by skilled artisans. This wallpaper's essence lies in the act of creation itself—two hands shaping delicate forms, echoing themes of collaboration and organic artistry.

Beadazzled Leaf exudes a sense of elegance in motion with its gold leaf embellishments capturing a delicate interplay of light and movement. The gold seems to float across the surface, evoking a quiet luxury as if suspended in a moment of graceful flow.

← Mother of Pearl Aphrodite captures the timeless allure of natural shells in a pattern that feels both contemporary and classic. The wallpaper transcends its decorative function, becoming a medium for exploring the fluid relationship between nature, art, and the human form.

↑ Ajiro Fanfare brings the organic warmth of wood veneer into a refined modern form with its fan-like pattern. The repeating geometric motif feels understated yet elegant, evoking a sense of harmony with its rhythmic simplicity. Here, Ajiro Fanfare becomes a floral canvas that emphasizes its earthly beauty.
