Maya Romanoff’s Conduit collection offers a dimensional and textural effect achieved through a dense, proprietary compound that is embossed with a metal conduit pipe, creating a series of angular designs. The final touch is a surface tipping of metallic to accentuate the material’s texture.

Inspired by the dynamic vistas of architect Antoni Gaudi’s mosaic art, Calico Wallpaper’s Tapestry is made with a technique in which wax is artfully applied then followed with a wash of pigment. The resulting pattern evokes shattered tile shards, with metallic lines interspersed throughout.

Phillip Jeffries’ Perfectly Plush sound-absorbing textile wallcovering is crafted with a suede-like fabric that is laminated to a soft layer of foam. Offered in seven colors, including Autumn Umber (shown), the 3D design is reminiscent of large subway tiles.
